

Sergei Mishchenko

Carol Wiggins

11/7/2022

Synthesis for sources

In multiple news articles, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump establish relationship inequivalence towards the country in reporting and justifying their actions. They both show in the article that unreliable approaches to politics show differences in investigating credible information.

Shawna's main idea in her news article is that unprompted approaches lead to devastating credibility on the side of Donald Trump. She comments that "Trump has denied the toilet-flushing allegations as categorically untrue." She establishes Trump's credibility is on the line with these documents. She has found "documents... torn up". On top of destroying documents, Trump's word on these documents' whereabouts can no longer be trusted.

Alana's main idea in her news article is the irrelevance of falsified information to create a bias to investigate Trump. Donald Trump highlights that "Hillary Clinton always denied" falsifying reports. Donald Trump establishes the downpour of the investigation is based on the word of Hillary Clinton and the Democrats. Alana later reports the Democrats admit to falsifying information. This establishes the Democrats as unreliable to investigate Trump any further until further intervention.

To compare these ideas, I believe the relevance of one's word plays a large role in representing a campaign as better than another campaign. In both articles, another campaigns' credibility is demolished based on faulty handling. To contrast them, many documents are used properly in order for allegations to be investigated by a third party. To contrast these ideas, these documents are incomprehensible by the news to be established as a bias to be judged based off the size of the political party.

Bibliography:

1. Mizelle, Shawna. "Hillary Clinton Jabs at Trump's Record-Keeping Controversy | CNN Politics." CNN, Cable News Network, 12 Feb. 2022,
<https://www.cnn.com/2022/02/12/politics/hillary-clinton-emails-trump-records/index.htm>
1.
2. Abramson, Alana. "Donald Trump Responds to Hillary Clinton Russia Dossier." Time,
Time, 25 Oct. 2017,
<https://time.com/4997604/donald-trump-hillary-clinton-russia-dossier/>.